Thanks all – s47E(c) has spoken to the chef. It's not the first time.

I'd prefer we take a different approach Sean, and I think the link to Commonwealth resources is a stretch. The kitchen is for staff use. We of course want people to be mindful of other users – but in my experience sending these sort of emails never ends well. I don't think it is a frequent occurrence.

Better to have a quiet word with the chef in question I think.

Hi all

I've received s47E(c) that someone is using the oven on level 5 to cook s47E(c) for s47E(c)

I'm not sure if this is a usual occurrence (first I've heard of it happening) but I suspect it would be pretty offensive for s47E(c) and others who don't like the smell of s47E(c), apart from being a questionable use of Commonwealth resources.

Would there be any objections if I was to send out a request to Level 5 occupants not to do this or would it be better sent from someone else?

Regards

Sean
